Cashless Payments Summit

25 & 26
JUNE
2015

Emperors Palace, Kempton Park, Johannesburg, Gauteng

CASHLESS PAYMENTS SUMMIT BACKGROUND

TARGET MARKET

- business development managers
- project developers/managers
- heads of developments/innovations
- software managers
- ICT managers
- application specialists
- systems managers
- IT project managers
- business analysts
- software /product development managers

The adoption of cashless payments technologies by various industries such as transport, retailers, financial institutions as well as a number of brands to assist consumers to easily transact wherever they are has been on the rise recently.

From smartcard use to mobile contactless payments technologies, these technologies have gained consumer confidence over the past years with mobile based transactions showing a solid future in the payments industry. Cashless payments enabled through the mobile channel have also enabled financial inclusion where otherwise consumers were excluded from the financial services sector. Industry players are confident that there is a definite and increasing shift from a reliance on hard cash and cards, to proximity-based and remote payments.

The cashless payments system not only enables traceable inflow and outflow of funds within any electronic financial service ecosystem, but also facilitates real time reconciliation. Moreover, this system provides timeless data on consumer spend preferences that can be extrapolated into strategic insights and decisions.

However, there is need to deliberate on the achievements of these innovations and its impact on the various economies. Moreover, the need to look into security measures that are in place to protect the consumers.

It is against this background that this summit is organised. It will give participants an opportunity to discuss the latest global trends, experiences, and best recommendations to the development of a cashless society. Emphasis would also be on the impact of these innovations on the economy as well as solutions to the shortcomings of these payments technologies.

The Cashless Payments Summit will provide you with the most up-to-date payments developments and technologies in the transport, mobile, banking and retailing markets. If you are involved in the payments industry or if your products and systems deal with payments, this is a must attend event.
